TSA’s Employee Assistance Program (EAP)

Offers an immediate 24/7 qualified resource to help assess and address an “at risk” employee before problems escalate. Licensed EAP counselors work in partnership with supervisors, offering a private source of expert consultation for both the supervisor and the “at risk” employee.

If you are worried about a co-worker, friend, or family member, and you think they may be considering suicide, follow the guidelines below and remember the acronym “ACE.”

Ask the question

“Are you thinking of killing or hurting yourself?” or “Do you think you might hurt yourself?”

Care

Listen with compassion, voice your concern, and be non-judgmental. Remove any means that could be used for self-injury.

Escort

Escort the individual to receive professional help (go to the nearest emergency room, local Employee Assistance Program counselor, or chaplain).

---

If you believe the person is currently suicidal, call 911 immediately; airport based law enforcement and Emergency Medical Services (EMS) are the primary responders qualified for assessing the situation and keeping the employee safe.
